YOUR APPLICATION DATED

Dear Sir/Madam

With reference to the above application of yours it gives me great pleasure to inform you that we decided not to invite you for an interview.

Frankly, we do not have the time to listen to your long drawn out boring life stories and your self-centered attitude.

Your profound rudeness calling us by our first names and the audacity and arrogance informing us that we should not hesitate to contact you – who the hell do you think you are!?

Your laziness, clearly illustrated by your using abbreviations instead of writing out words in full, we did not find amusing either.

Your attempt to flatter us by telling us what a fantastic company we are did not bear any fruit. Our reputation does not require your opinion.

Your knowledge of the English language seems to be flimsy too: Surely you know that experiences only happen in connection with the supernatural? For the rest of us experience is enough. And you seem to lack some.

As to your qualifications, we require persons with degrees obtained at a university and not someone who comes from a college.

Your thinking might cause you some serious bodily harm and we suggest that you stop doing that.

We need people who can do something and not someone who merely thinks he/she can do it.

But alas, what can one expect from someone with such an inferiority complex which not even permits you to write I with a capital letter.

Please do not contact us again and please hesitate if you ever consider doing that.

Yours sincerely

TheBoss

ALSO CHECK YOUR NOTES:

- do not hesitate to contact us - company to you YOU: please contact me should you
- don't, can't - do not / can not
- i - always with a capital letter : I
- do NOT flatter them - do not tell them how fantastic they are
- experiences - experience is a plural form
- college - a college offers diplomas / a university degrees
- I think - rather I believe and better, don't use it at all
