(Petermann nods and grins.)

Mr. Petermann: Of course! It's so kind of you to call the taxi for us.

Heinrich: Don't mention it.

(The taxi arrives.)

Mr. Petermann: As I get travel-sick I must sit in the front of the car.

Heinrich: That's no problem. I can sit in the back.

(Both of them greet the taxi driver who just nods and they get into the taxi.)

Mr. Petermann: By the way, why do you go to the town hall?

Heinrich: Oh I'm working there. I have an important job there.

(The taxi arrives at the town hall after two kilometres.)

Mr. Petermann: Oh, I have a problem and I'm so embarrassed. I have no money with me and I lost my credit card yesterday. Please, would you kindly pay the fare.

(Heinrich looks confused.)

Heinrich: (sighs) Ok, I'll do it then.

(Both leave the car.)

Mr. Petermann: May I ask what important job you have?

Heinrich: Of course, I'm the chauffeur of the mayor.

Mr. Petermann: Great! I'll see you then tomorrow. I'm the new mayor.
